NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

Your students will love the Spanish sounds of this exciting and passionate dance, which introduces Act IV of this operatic masterpiece. The melody is taken from an Andalusian (south Spanish) dance entitled “Cuerpo bueno,” by Bizet’s contemporary Manuel Garcia (1775–1832). The expressive opening melody will help develop your woodwinds’ lyrical playing, while the intriguing Spanish rhythms and hemiolas will keep everyone on their toes! Careful doublings make this arrangement playable by any group, even those with limited instrumentation! Includes parts for violin III, alto saxophone, bass clarinet, and piano.

When it first opened in 1873, Bizet’s final opera “Carmen” was considered quite scandalous, and the initial performances had to be toned down to meet the moral standards of the day. Reaction to the music itself was mixed—some listeners were dismayed by the fact that Bizet’s score included some spoken dialogue (unusual for the time), while others objected to the excess of “Spanishry” in a French opera. This negative reaction deeply affected Bizet, and when he died at the age of 36, just after the work’s 33rd performance, he was a broken man, bitter at the rejection of his work. He never lived to see it become what is arguably the most popular opera ever composed.
