

Harold Arlen and E. Y. Harburg are probably best known for their score for the 1939 motion picture The Wizard of Oz, which included the famous song “Over the Rainbow.” That same year the songwriting duo teamed up to write “Lydia, the Tattooed Lady,” for the motion picture At the Circus, starring the Marx Brothers comedy team.

“Lydia,” a novelty number, was sung in the film by Groucho Marx, playing the character of J. Cheever Loophole, an attorney for a financially unstable troupe of circus performers. Songwriters Arlen and Harburg have said they modeled the song on the patter songs from the operettas of Gilbert and Sullivan. And, of course, they crafted it specifically for the singing style of Groucho Marx, a friend of Arlen’s.

Some notes on the lyrics.

- The Battle of Waterloo took place in 1815 during the Napoleonic Wars involving several nations against the French.
- The Wreck of the Hesperus* is a poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow describing a dramatic shipwreck.
- The well-known painting of Washington crossing the Delaware in 1776 near Trenton, New Jersey, is by the German-American painter Emanuel Leutze.
- Pablo Picasso was a famous Spanish artist. But ‘Mendel Picasso?’ Obviously an imposter! The tattoo artist perhaps?
- The explorer Captain Spaulding was a character created by Groucho Marx for the Broadway show and film Animal Crackers.
- Legend has it that Lady Godiva rode unclothed through the streets of her town. In this version she wears pajamas.
- Grover Whalen was a New York City politician who, in 1939, unveiled the Trylon, a 700 foot spire, at the New York World’s Fair.
- Vaslav Nijinsky was a famous Polish ballet dancer.
- Before he became a U.S. President, Andrew Jackson served in the War of 1812 where he led a charge up a hill against the British in the Battle of New Orleans.
