About the Composition

Visigoths is a work for concert band commissioned by the Waynesville Middle School Band in Waynesville, North Carolina-Ralph Caldwell, director. This setting is playable by multiple instrumentations, based on the configuration of your own ensemble. The music is a tone poem of sorts for the developing band. The idea for the piece came from my love of historical novels involving fictional stories based on actual facts. One book in particular referenced the history of the Visigoths. I was immediately intrigued. After some modest research, I discovered that the Visigoths were a division of the Goths and one of the most important groups in Germany. They were a rival of the great Roman Empire in the 4th century A.D. After many years and many battles, the Visigoths were finally defeated, but had contributed significantly to the culture of Italy and Spain.

The piece begins with a four-note motif that will become the basis of the work. Ominous in tone and foreboding in nature, this foreshadows some of the war-like music to come. There are moments of victory and moments of defeat. The slow opening leads to some dissonant chords that announce the fast battle music. The low voices in the ensemble are featured here. Bring out all the accents and play the quarter notes with a strong marcato attack. After passing the melody around the ensemble and developing the four note motif, the music withdraws to a quiet statement at m. 74. It bursts into chords at m. 85 that sets up the major statement at m. 90. Be mindful of balance here and make sure the woodwinds carry their weight. After an arrival at m. 100, the low voices set up the final push to the end with a quiet rhythmic figure. Maintain the tutti crescendo all the way to the conclusion.
