

Review!

Good luck,
young student.

Johann Sebastian Bach Name _____

Place the letter of the correct answer in the space provided.

For True/False questions, print True or False in the space provided.

1. Throughout his life, Bach was always a _____.
A. violinist C. clavier tuner
B. church musician D. singer
2. True or False: Bach lived his entire life in Germany. _____
3. Which instrument did Bach not play? _____
A. harpsichord C. clavier
B. organ D. oboe
4. True or False: Bach wrote several operas. _____
5. A toccata is _____ A. structured
A fugue is _____ B. in a free style
6. True or False: Bach never took music lessons; he was a completely self-taught musician. _____
7. True or False: At one point in his life, Bach was a school teacher. _____
8. As a child, Bach performed in a musical group. It was _____
A. a choir C. an orchestra
B. a band D. a ballet
9. During his life, Bach composed _____
A. less than 100 musical works
B. more than 100 musical works
10. True or False: Bach became a wealthy man because hundreds of his compositions were published during his lifetime. _____

Bonus:

What composer was born the same year as Bach?

Franz Joseph Haydn

What I composed	Orchestra	Concerto	Chamber Music	Keyboard	Opera	Theater/Film	Ballet	Band	Choral	Vocal Solos
Franz Joseph Haydn	>	>	>	>	>				>

Haydn Factoids:

- Haydn composed over 175 pieces for the baryton, a stringed instrument played with a bow which had as many as 40 strings. The baryton was the only instrument his patron, Prince Esterhazy, could play.
- Ludwig van Beethoven was a student of Haydn.
- Although he never had children of his own, Haydn was often called Papa Haydn because of his jolly personality.
- According to Haydn, he was not influenced by any other composer except Mozart. He said, “There was no one near to confuse me, so I was forced to become more original.”

1732: Birth of Franz Joseph Haydn; birth of George Washington.

1742: George Frideric Handel’s Messiah first performed in Dublin, Ireland.

1752: Benjamin Franklin proves that lightning is electricity.

1760: George III crowned King of England.

1770: James Cook discovers east coast of Australia.

1775: American Revolution begins.

1783: Wolfgang Mozart composes Mass in C minor.

1802: Ludwig van Beethoven composes Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

1809: Death of Franz Joseph Haydn; James Madison is inaugurated as 4th President of U.S.

What in the world
is happening?

Franz Joseph Haydn

Frahntz Yo'-zef Hide'-n

born
March 31, 1732
Rohrau, Austria
died
May 31, 1809
Vienna, Austria

“

Whoever studies
music, let his daily
bread be Haydn.
—Jean Ingres
(1780-1867)

”

A composer of the Classical era.

Franz Joseph Haydn was the second of twelve children. His family was quite poor. When Franz was six, his parents sent him to live with a family relative, Johann Frankh, in Hainburg, Austria. Mr. Frankh was a private music teacher and gave Franz lessons on the harpsichord, violin, and in music harmony and theory. In Hainburg, young Franz sang in a church boychoir and eventually became the chief soloist for the group.

When Franz turned 17 and became too old for the boychoir, he made a living playing harpsichord and violin. He also began composing and completed his first mass at age 19, his first string quartet at 23, and his first symphony at 27.

He married his wife, Anna, in 1760. They separated a few years later but Haydn continued to support Anna for the rest of her life.

In 1761 (age 29), he became the assistant choirmaster to Prince Paul Esterhazy, an Austrian prince who was a great admirer of music. Haydn eventually became a full-time court musician and lived and worked in the Esterhazy palace for 29 years, until the death of the prince in 1790. His daily routine required him to provide music for family concerts, private performances, and worship services. The prince also had an excellent orchestra which regularly performed Haydn's compositions.

Living in the palace, Haydn was cut off from the musical centers of Europe and, except for a few brief trips to Vienna, Austria, was not exposed to the music of other composers. He therefore developed his own style of music. He was not influenced by other composers with the exception of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, who Haydn met in 1781. When they met, Haydn was 49 and Mozart was 25. Nevertheless, the older Haydn was influenced by the younger Mozart.

In 1791, after the death of Prince Esterhazy, Haydn traveled to London where he was highly regarded by British royalty. Here he met George Frideric Handel and was much impressed with Handel's oratorios. In 1795 he returned permanently to Austria and settled in Vienna where he wrote the Emperor's Hymn, which is now the national anthem of Austria. Inspired by Handel, Haydn also wrote several successful oratorios.

By his mid-60s, Haydn's health was failing. For the last 10 years of his life he wrote little, although he frequently attended concert performances of his music.

Franz Joseph Haydn was a personable man, generous and honorable. He was much admired by royalty throughout Europe. He wrote a large number of works and was very industrious as a composer. He was fortunate to have a patron, Prince Esterhazy, who gave him the freedom to write music for a variety of occasions. However, it was not until Haydn was over 40 that his music was successful in concert halls outside the Esterhazy palace.

Listen!

Franz Joseph Haydn (1732-1809) Symphony in G Major, No. 94 (Surprise), Second Movement

Haydn wrote more music in his lifetime than even he could remember. Notice the number of this symphony: 94! He wrote a grand total of 104. When he was visiting in London (age 59-63) he was introduced to King George III who said, “You have composed a great deal, Dr. Haydn,” and Haydn replied, “Yes, Sire, more perhaps, than was wise!”

He wrote the Surprise Symphony while in London, England, and made use of the large orchestra of 41 players at his disposal. At this time, Haydn was employed by Prince Esterhazy of Austria, and his works were most often performed at the palace for entertainment at small dinner parties. He was accustomed to writing for strings alone, without any brass or woodwind instruments. But the audiences of London were more sophisticated, so Haydn added brass and woodwinds to his orchestration for the Surprise symphony. The London audiences loved it.

The surprise, which gives this symphony its title, is found in this movement. At the very beginning the music is peaceful, melodic and pianissimo (very soft). Then, suddenly a chord explodes from the full orchestra, and this is a surprise to the listener. When this very loud “surprise” chord is played, can you also hear the timpani being played? The timpani, sometimes called a kettle drum, is part of the percussion section.

- What instrument is playing the melody (first theme) at the very beginning?
- Raise your hand when you hear the second theme.

TIMING

“

I tell you on my word
as an honest man
that your son is the greatest composer I have ever heard of.
–Franz Joseph
Haydn, to Leopold
Mozart, the father of
Wolfgang Amadeus
Mozart.

”

- :01 The opening melody is played in a detached manner on low and medium low string instruments. When analyzing a piece of music, musicians will refer to the opening melody as the “A” melody or the “A” theme. Subsequent melodies will be labeled “B,” “C,” “D,” and so on.
- :19 The opening melody is repeated, softer than before.
- :37 SURPRISE! A loud chord is suddenly heard. This sudden, loud chord is what caused people to refer to this symphony as the “Surprise” symphony. A second melody begins here. It is a smoother melody, contrasting with the detached opening melody, but ends similarly to the “A” melody
- :58 The woodwind instruments enter. Listen in particular for the flutes and oboe.
- 1:17 More instruments enter on the “A” melody. The violins play a counter-melody.
- 1:36 The “A” melody repeats with the violin counter-melody.
- 1:54 The “B” melody (the theme first played at :37) is heard again, this time with a counter-melody.